

EDITOR'S PREFACE

This book of essays was the brainchild of the former Dean of the Faculty of Law at the University of Calgary, Connie Hunt. It was her belief that the Faculty of Law should provide some lasting contribution to celebrate the Twenty-Fifth Anniversary of the University of Calgary as an independent institution. This book represents the fruit of the Faculty's labours in that regard. The original idea was that the book would investigate, from an Albertan perspective, legal developments over the past twenty-five years. Thus, six of the nine articles included here adopt something of an Albertan focus. The other three, however, are more generally Canadian in their content, and one of these being a work on legal theory, both transcends boundaries and avoids any overt twenty-five year stance.

Financially this project would not have been viable without generous support from the Foundation for Legal Research in Canada centred in Vancouver, the University of Calgary in the form of its Special Projects Fund and its Twenty-Fifth Anniversary Fund, and the Faculty of Law. I gratefully recognize the assistance of these bodies.

I also acknowledge what I believe to be the wisdom of the Alberta Law Review in agreeing to publish this work; the help and advice of the entire Editorial Board of the Calgary office of the Alberta Law Review, especially Edward Rowe, Will Osler and Karen Hertel, as well as the assistance of prior editors, Ron Girvitz and Deirdre Mullan; the continuing support and encouragement of the present Dean of the Faculty of Law at the University of Calgary, Sheilah Martin, and of the Faculty's administrator Bev Powell; the word processing and typesetting skills of Shirl Roch; and, of course, the energy and creativity of the authors themselves.

Finally, I would like to thank my co-editor, Richard Devlin, now of Dalhousie Law School, for his industry and prowess in reviewing the articles.
