

A TRIBUTE

This issue of the Alberta Law Review is dedicated to Professor D. T. Anderson, who after ten years of dedicated service will leave The University of Alberta in 1971. His many contributions, sometimes unacknowledged, have had far reaching effects. All who knew him will miss his valuable guidance.

During his tenure at Alberta, Professor Anderson has served on almost every faculty committee, from Admissions, and Curriculum, to the present Building Committee. In order to do so, he has given freely of his own time. In addition to many Faculty obligations, Professor Anderson has served on many University bodies as the representative of the Faculty of Law. He was also one of the principal forces in the formation of the Institute of Law Research and Reform, and has served on the Institute Board since its inception. Professor Anderson has provided support for the practising bar both through his constant resourcefulness on matters of academic interest, and as a member of the ad hoc Committee on Continuing Legal Education.

Students in the Faculty of Law always found Professor Anderson's door open and found him willing to discuss problems and give guidance where possible. Professor Anderson remained personally interested in his students throughout his tenure at Alberta.

In the history of the Alberta Law Review, Professor Anderson showed keen interest and concern for the Review, always ready to provide advice when sought. His unassuming modesty left many of his contributions unknown and unacknowledged.

The Review extends to Professor Anderson the best of wishes in his new position, positive in the belief that it will prove satisfying and rewarding, both academically and personally.
