

The articles in this issue of the Alberta Law Review are selected from papers presented at the Canadian Association of Law Teachers Annual Conference, held at the Law Centre, University of Alberta, Edmonton, from June 1 to June 4, 1975, on the topic "One Hundred Years of the Supreme Court of Canada."

The paper presented by W. R. Lederman, and portions of the paper presented by W. S. Tarnopolsky, were recently published in the Canadian Bar Review. However, in the interest of completeness, the Alberta Law Review was authorized to publish them with the otherpapers in this special issue.